Smoking Ladies.

But what one thinks in America of cigarette-smakingwomen one soon ceases to think in Europe where it is so frequent. For does not fat, famous and froliosome Enily Faithful smoke like a Michigan tug boat? Does not the Duchess of Edinburgh enjoy a quiet puff now and then, and even the Princess of Wales have her pretty little eigarette case which she hides profoundly from the smoke abhorring nose of her royal mamma-in-law? Mme. Ratezzi in Italy is said to be a great smoker, and so also Elizabeth Thompson, the artist in England. The two daughters of the Due d'Orleans, one of whom was the beautiful Mercedes.

Queen of Spain, were fond of a quiet smoke, as also is the wife of the Pretender, Don Carlos. Although smoking ladies are so numerous in Europe one often hears it insisted upon here that American ladies are the greatest habitual smokers in the world. "I never saw a lady smoke in Am real." I had genation to quently to say to France, and always with the unsatisfactory feeling that I was not hair believe t. Once upon a time in Paris I lived several months in an extensive pousion des demoiselles. le this flourishing school was Miss N-, a young American of twenty-two, from Boston, a sort of parlor boarder, who had axera privileges besides that of a private bedraim, when every other pupil slept to a tray couch in a dormitory that looked exactly like a bospital. "Ah, tut your American ladies do smoke, acd smoke a great deal more than our Freech men," said the matron of the school one day.
Mile. N. smokes much more than M. le Professour, and if you don't believe it I will some day show you the asnes that come down from her room." I said nothing. And yet I could have told that which would have made madame's golden wig stand up like quils on a fretful percupine and reduced the matron to a state of gib-bering idiocy. I could have teld that, indeed, many cigarettes were smoked in Mile. N.'s room each night, and that great were the ashes thereof; also could I have told that every night when that huge dormitory full of pupils was still, and every girl ssleep, four of the teachers, all girls themselves of from twenty to twenty-two whose business it was to worth and guard the sleeping fold, stole softly from their beds, light, and thus into Miss N-'s room, where, with a bottle or two of beer and unlimited cigar-ettes, they smoked, drank and chatted tillgoodness only knows how late—as if this were, indeed, not a pension des demoiselles, but a popular Brassene in the Latin Quarter. "Girls, girls! how indiscreet!" I exclaimed one night when returning from the theatre after midnight, I was quietly let into Miss N-'s roon, whither I had been attracted by the light, and where I found the smoke so thick that I could only half distinguish five flushed and laughing faces, looking if truth must be told, more like the merry bacchantes of Rubens' pictures than like the nun-like maidens of a pension des demois-elles in virtuous, monastic France. "Ah, but you must not betray us!" they exclaimed must amuse ourselves a little, and you know how triste our life is here!"—Chicago Inter-

Animals and Music. -- Some animals are fund of music; horses especially love to hear martial music, and the sound of the trumpet will fill them with fire and spirit. They will draw near and listen with attention as great as that of human lovers of mu-ic at a concert. Cows, also, are susceptible to the charms of music, and iustances have been known, when the organ is playing and the singing going on, of cows drawing nearer to the wall that separates the field from the churchyard, and stand listening gravely. A French state prisoner beg ged, as a great favor, that he might have the musical instrument on which he played, to amuse himself in the prison; and what was his surprise, after be had played a few tunes, to see some mice appear and stay quietly hearkening to the playing, and at its conclusion returning to their holes. Nor was this all; several large spiders came also, and remanined during the musical performance, and then ascended to their corners. Other instances have been known of spiders showing this same take for music, and coming out to listen to it. Perhaps when the ancients wrote the story of Orpheus and told how he charmed the brutes, they may have known something of this love of music im-

THE WOMEN OF EGYPT - They are not allowed to go out of doors as we are, and many of them nev r get beyond the walls of their houses. The cows sleep in the same hurs with the people. These buts are made of mud without windows, and the doors so small that the wonder is how the people get in. They do not wash their babies till they are a year old, because it is considered unlucky to do so. They rarely comb their hair from month to month. Their chief meal is at succes; the rest of the time they eat a pisce of breat when they are hungry. They never use plates or knives and firks. All sit around the table on the flor. Bread is their daily food, and each family makes for itself, as it is a kind of disgrace to buy "street bread." Toe women clean the corn and carry it on their heads to the mill. It is made into thin, small cakes, stuck against the sides of an oven, and baked in less than a minute. A hundred loaves are not too many for a family of four in a week. Travelers are usually expected to eat three loaves apiece. They make butter in a strange way. A goatskin halt filled with milk is hung on a peg. and then a woman, taking hold of a long string tied to it, i rks it to and fro till the butter comes. Then she drains it, but never washes or sales it. Their favorite dish is ric: cooked with this butter.
